

REview and PREview
Wed 10/11/2017 7:30 PM

Good Wednesday evening. I trust your week is off and running...in a good direction.

REview – The text and recording of Barb Maynes' reflection on Sunday are included in the sermons portion of our website. Her insights into seeing the old (past) through the new (present) were spectacular. People are still commenting on how and what she shared!
Thanks Barb!

PREview - Sunday's reading from "The Book of Acts" will be 18:23-28 and 19:1-10, which is a selection from the larger section that covers St. Paul's third missionary (or witnessing) journey (18:23 - 21:17). The Psalm for the day is Psalm 106.

This Sunday will be the second to the last in my series on "Acts." What I want us to focus on is a verse that typically receives little attention; at least I've never paid much attention to it. Here is it:
"Now there came to Ephesus a Jew named Apollos, a native from Alexandria (Egypt); he was an eloquent man, well-versed in the scriptures." (Acts 18:24, NRSV)

We will take a look at how eloquence added more than greater luster to the early years of bearing witness to Jesus.

I hope you will make every effort to gather with us for prayer and celebration on Sunday. 10 AM. Sanctuary.

Only YOU can bring what only you can share

See you soon.
Pastor Tom
