

REview and PREview
Wed 3/13/2019 1:40 pm

Good Wednesday afternoon - I trust you can see the sunshine!

REview - - Sunday's sermon both audio and print has been uploaded onto our website for your review. I've already had a few interesting conversations with some of you.

PREview - The readings for Sunday are Psalm 27, Philippians 3:17-4:1, and Luke 13:31-35. I think we will be focusing on the theme of "taking the long way around."

In the meantime, here's a portion of the reflection (based on Luke 13:31-35) we read during Tuesday's Morning Prayer gathering:

"And what is the way? It certainly is no escape route, no fast track out of Jerusalem, that ancient icon of hope and pain. It is a narrow path, a lowly path, right into the deepest, darkest heart of the human dilemma—our desire for God alongside our consuming hunger for things that will never satisfy, our fear and bluster, our imprisoned souls. Like a mother hen, how God longs to gather us in under her wings. If only we were willing, or at least willing to be willing, we might begin to learn the Jesus way, a more humble way, a way to be utterly free." Written by Kayla McClurg